the amount of religious teaching given in these schools is exceedingly small, and that the provisions of the Public School system allow of more definite and of a more liberal supply of religious teaching than has ever been produced. These opinions, however, are not the result of any personal bias, but are the result of those by whom they are made.

When Dr. Barker says that many of the Denominational schools of the country have rendered good service, and that the instruction given in these schools has been equal to that given in the Public schools, he states what will generally be believed. But for any school which those schools have given to the country their promoters have been most liberally rewarded. If the Church of England schools have rendered a large amount of public service they have received a large amount of public money. Dr. Barker would have us believe that through these schools the Church has aided the State, but he repudiates the doctrine that in keeping up Denominational schools the State is either supporting religion or aiding the Church. But the whole tenor of the Bishop's address is to the effect that the State is keeping up Denominational schools is giving the Churches the power of teaching religion in those schools. If this be not State aid to religion, what can it be?

There are portions of the Bishop's address which will command public sympathy, but the general argument of it is not likely to have much weight, either with the Legislature or with the community at large. After all that is said, the contention of the Bishop requires that the schools of the Church of England and of the Church of Rome shall be supported at the expense of funds which are not to these bodies merely, but which belong to the public at large. Dr. Barker complains that Public schools have been set up where Denominational schools have been doing the work of a locality, complains that is, that the Church of England and the Church of Rome were not allowed to educate other people's children as well as their own. The fairness of this, although apparent to the Bishop of Sydney has, happily, not been apparent to the Council of Education. The Council, although it has made no violent interference with Denominational schools, has pursued a policy, the result of which has been a gradual diminution, and will be the ultimate extinction of these schools. This policy is believed to be not only an inevitable but a just one. Although many Denominational schools have been efficient, many of them have been inefficient, and where they have been efficient they have often been unnecessary. The system of perpetuating Denominational schools is inconsistent with the policy of the country, and unnecessary for its wants, and although there are many who do not wish to see the Denominational system rudely handled, or the schools it has brought into existence too summarily disposed of, any such treatment of the 19th clause as the Bishop of Sydney has asked for would, we believe, be stoutly resisted by a majority of the people.

Now that the land racket is over, there seems to be no one to say a good word for it. Mr. Watson calls it a mania—a veritable mania, and speaks thankfully of its having spent itself. Squatters and free selectors and Government were all mad together, and ran riot over land purchases. Of course, after such an injurious excitement, there must be an equally injurious reaction. The results, however, are not so disastrous as those of a mining mania. In the latter case people spend their money on what turns out to be practically worthless. Those who buy the land, even if they make a premature investment, and mortgage their future industry for a long term of years, at least have the land to show for their money, and the property they hold is an improving one. The mischief, however, is that capital is locked up unproductively, or at a very low average of profit, and the heavy condition of indebtedness is established, which affects injuriously all the financial relations of the colony. All this is now seen, admitted, and deplored. It is well to be wise after the event; better still to be wise before and during the event.

It would not have been very difficult in this matter to be wise, but unfortunately there was a direct temptation to be foolish, and the temptation was irresistible. Both Government and people rejoiced in the abundance that was poured into the Treasury. It created for the moment a "rosy time." The Minister for Works was able to meet all applicants with a smiling face, and the Government money was sent flying in all directions in a way that pleased the working classes. The voices of hostile critics were drowned in the general chorus of congratulation, and by general consent prudence was put off till a distant day. Prudence, accompanied by a little repentance, is putting in an appearance, and as we now look back upon the wake of our ship of State, we are beginning to think that she might have been steered more judiciously.

The Government really had it in its power at any time to have graduated the check on the land mania. If a private proprietor found that an estate which he had made salable in allotments at a fixed price, was going off faster than he expected or intended, and that a sudden rise in the market value was making it the prey of speculators who were reaping a large intermediate profit, he would, as a matter of common sense, have raised the price to meet the altered state of things. But Governments are so hampered by routine and by legislative difficulties, that a Minister hesitates about protecting the public estate, although he would not hesitate a minute as to the protection of his private estate. So far as the auction sale of land is concerned, Mr. Farrer applied the natural remedy at last by raising the upset price of land five shillings an acre, but he did not apply it till the mania was nearly over, and he did not seek from the Legislature the power to raise it as respects other modes of alienation; so that while effective in one direction his remedy was ineffective in others, and even multiplied anomalies.

However, we are now in a position in which the revenue from auction sales, though not stopped, is seriously reduced. The turn of the tide began when we ceased to accumulate a surplus, the tide has fallen still further when we have to acknowledge a small deficit. But for certain, no expenditure that deficit would have been half a million; as it is, it will probably not exceed two hundred thousand pounds. We have often pointed out that the surplus if carefully nursed would serve as a buffer to ease off the shock of deficits for several years. Last season, however, the Government made a grand onslaught on the remaining surplus, and appropriated the greater part of it. Enough is left, however, to pay the cost of the Exhibition, and to meet the year's deficit. After that is done, there will not be more than enough left to constitute a healthy little balance to the credit of the revenue. We may, therefore, reckon this year as that in which the surplus finally vanished. It is not, of course, all actually gone in the sense of being actually spent, but it is all appropriated, and it cannot be appropriated a second time without annulling the first appropriation. But we cannot depend upon the surplus any more as a remedy for deficits, and therefore it is that the time has come for the Treasurer to make that clear to the public, and show them that henceforth the annual expenditure must be met by an annual income. Mr. Watson deserves credit for his plain-speaking in this matter. It is true that he has only stated simple facts, and facts with which a great many persons are already acquainted. Still there is always a temptation to Treasurer to make things pleasant, and the public sometimes like to have disagreeable necessities kept out of sight as much as is possible, and much longer than is wise. It is proper that we should know that we are not so much of money as we were, and that we cannot afford any longer to be extravagant. In all this there is nothing "deplorable." We are not in difficulties, still less are we insolvent. We can live comfortably within our income if we choose, and find it an income which other countries with equal populations may look upon with envy. We are one of the lightest taxed countries in the world, and for our size and numbers one of the richest; our only hardship is that we must not live upon our capital—no great calamity surely to sensible people.

We have often complained that, in dealing with the land question, the Government has not displayed that candour and that desire to lay before Parliament and the public full information as to the facts which the circumstances called for. No complaint can justly be made on that score in the present occasion. The Financial Statement, Mr. Watson's speech was a full and honest exposition of the financial situation, free from any indication of a wish that unfavourable facts should be suppressed, or that difficulties should be glossed over; and the tables appended (for the first time) to the Estimates of Ways and Means which are now before the House and the country are of great value and interest. An abstract given of the public revenue and receipts for the years 1850, 1855, 1860, 1865, and 1870, and thenceforward for each year until 1878, with estimates for 1879 and 1880; and in each case shown the population for the year, and the per head of each division of revenue and each leading item in it. Such a table as this will be of service in considering the fiscal changes now proposed; and such a table, continued on future similar occasions, or published annually in the Statistical Register, would greatly facilitate the discussion of fiscal changes whenever the need for them might arise. Nothing should be more cordially welcomed than a disposition on the part of a Government to conduct financial legislation in broad daylight. We have suffered too much in days gone by from gas and darkness not to acknowledge that. And it is the more pleasing to recognize evidence of this disposition on the part of the Government, because the colony is now making an exhibition of itself before the world. Whilst our own people are with more or less earnestness and intelligence examining the productions of the world's industry in the Garden Palace, men from other countries, specially qualified and specially appointed for the purpose, are studying the statistics of the colony and public documents that give them an insight into the nature of its resources, and the conditions and habits of its people. It was particularly to be desired under such circumstances that the truth upon financial questions should be told fully and fairly. We have always endeavoured to do that ourselves, but the original sources of information are in the hands of the Government, and it is satisfactory to perceive an increasing tendency to make use of them for the public benefit.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The light portion of the English mail via Suez, brought by R.M.S. Tanjong, reached Sydney at an early hour yesterday morning, one day before time-table date, notwithstanding the detention of the mail at Southampton for ten or eleven days, owing to the mishap to the P. and O. Company's steamship Australia. One of the English letters bag for Sydney, which arrived at Melbourne on Tuesday morning, and per Tanjong, seems to have been placed on board the barque (A) with the newspaper bags, and heavy forward mail, and only reached here last evening late. The letters enclosed in the bags mentioned will be delivered by the first delivery at 8.45 a.m. to-day.

The telegraph line between Brisbane and Temerford was interrupted all night by a severe thunderstorm. In the Legislative Council yesterday a number of petitions against the Education Bill were received from Roman Catholic communities. The Navigation Bill further Amendment Bill was read a third time, and ordered to be transmitted to the Legislative Assembly, with the usual message. The principal part of the sitting was devoted to the consideration of the Equity Bill, which was passed through committee, with some comparatively unimportant amendments.

The Electoral Bill of the present Government was laid before the Legislative Assembly last evening by Sir Henry Parkes. The bill proposes, as will be seen by a synopsis of it in another column, to divide the colony into 68 electorates, to be represented by 108 members. It also provides for the trial of election petitions by a Judge of the Supreme Court, instead of by a Parliamentary Committee of Elections and Qualifications. Sydney is divided into three electoral divisions, each of which is to return three members—nine in all. Under the new bill, the University retains its privilege of returning a member to Parliament.

The good behaviour which has characterized the conduct of the debates in the Legislative Assembly during the present session was abruptly terminated last night, and the old system of obstruction, so well known in former sessions, was once more resumed. The opponents of the Public Instruction Bill, ignoring their protestations that they would submit to the will of the majority, set up a hopeless system of talking against time, from the hour when the House resolved itself into committee—before 6 o'clock in the afternoon—until the time when we went to press.

To-day's Sydney Mail contains a complete report, extending over several pages, of the proceedings of the week, namely, the trial and conviction of the Wandahady bushrangers. An immense amount of interest has been excited by this extraordinary trial, and hence a paper which gives an exhaustive account of it is sure to find a ready and extensive circulation throughout the colony.

The trial of the Wandahady bushrangers came to an end last night, by the verdict of guilty being recorded against all the prisoners. After a trial lasting four days the jury was dismissed to consider their verdict, a few minutes before 4 o'clock. At precisely 6 o'clock they entered the Court, and returned their verdict as above; but recommending Rogers, Williams, and Bennett to mercy. Mr. Justice Gurnee, who had known in former sessions, was once more resumed. The opponents of the Public Instruction Bill, ignoring their protestations that they would submit to the will of the majority, set up a hopeless system of talking against time, from the hour when the House resolved itself into committee—before 6 o'clock in the afternoon—until the time when we went to press.

prisoner Scott attempted to make another speech, but he was stopped by the Judge, and the prisoners were removed.

Last night Dr. Arthur Renwick, one of the candidates for the representation of East Sydney in the Legislative Assembly, addressed a meeting of his friends and supporters in the Protestant Hall, and was enthusiastically received. Mr. R. T. Perfor, J.P., was voted in the chair, in the absence of Mr. C. J. Roberts, who was prevented from attending, and sent a note of apology. The chairman, in a few highly eulogistic remarks, introduced the candidate to the meeting. Dr. Renwick said that, though somewhat embarrassed in content, he felt the first election of the colony he felt emboldened by the fact that many of his auditors who had helped to place him in his present position, attended to assist him on still further in the path of progress. He then referred to the various questions which are attracting public attention at the present time. He first took up the temperance question, and urged an immediate change in the existing law. He was in favour of licensing being under the control of boards or of one of the Judges. The water supply, sewage, land question, primary education, higher education were each and all dealt with; and, at the close, a vote of confidence in the candidate was carried by acclamation. There were about 400 persons present, and the proceedings were very orderly throughout.

The friends of Dr. Fischer will be glad to hear that he has been admitted to the Honorary Society of the Royal College of Physicians, England; and that though his return to the colony has been deferred a few months, he may be expected to arrive in Sydney in the course of next June.

The usual monthly meeting of the Steamship Owners' Association was held on Wednesday evening, at the residence of the Hon. Mr. Justice Gurnee, Captain Fred. H. Toulton in the chair. After several minutes of detail and routine were disposed of, a discussion on the effect of the proclamation made by his Excellency the Governor in the Government Gazette of the 2nd inst. was entered into. It was expressed that this was a step in the right direction, but that it was not so far enough, as in Victoria they had taken advantage of an Act of the Imperial Legislature (24 and 25 Victoria, chap. 52, August 1, 1881), by which steamships clearing out under the Imperial Passenger Act had greater advantages and facilities given them than when clearing out under the Act in New South Wales. It was unanimously resolved that such disadvantages should be removed, and the secretary was instructed to bring this matter to the notice of the Government again. Correspondence with the Railway Department in re conditions upon which goods were carried by steamship companies, in conjunction with that department, coarwise, was also submitted to the action taken up to the present approved of.

Last night another meeting of superintendents and delegates of the various Fire Brigades, was held at the Board-room of the City Mutual Fire Insurance Company. Mr. T. P. Garvan, director of the said company, was voted in the chair. The following representatives were present:—Messrs. C. Brown, superintendent, T. W. Dawson, superintendent, Mr. David Gray, T. H. C. Parr, president, T. D. Murray, assistant superintendent, City Fire Brigade; Captain Tinning, A. Scott, treasurer, No. 1 Volunteer Fire Brigade; Horan, treasurer, W. F. Crescent, by the Lad (by Oxford Lad, imported) and Minerva 6th
Kensworth, by Oxford Diver (ditto), and Minerva
Kensworth, by St. Clair Lad (ditto), and Minerva
2nd
Andover, by Pearl Diver (imported), and Minerva
3rd
Andover, by Pearl Diver (imported), and Minerva
4th

THIS select little herd is simply being sold because Mr. D. does not find it convenient on a small estate to work it Durham one together, both rapidly increasing. The auction would remind breeders and beginners that such a chance is offered of securing choice, pure-bred females.

For catalogues, containing pedigrees, ages, and full particulars apply to the Auctioneer.
